

✓
Jean Monnet Module for European Monetary Law and Faculty of Law
University of Niš is organizing an international scientific conference:

"The Influence of European Integration on the Development of Monetary Law"

30-31 May 2023

Faculty of Law University of Niš (Serbia)

Call for Papers

We wish to announce the International Scientific Conference "The Influence of European Integration on the Development of Monetary Law", which will be held at the Faculty of Law, University of Niš, on the 30th and 31st of May 2023 as an online event. The central Conference day for paper presentation will be 30th May 2023.

If we carefully look at events in international monetary relations in the last decade, we can notice a new wave of European monetary law, more intense, richer, and more complex than all the other events on the previous global monetary scene. New tendencies are not only characterized by the primacy of soft law over primary monetary solutions, new jurisdictions of international judicial instances for resolving monetary and fiscal disputes, new central bank powers, and the evolution of the concept of monetary sovereignty, but also in making more "human approaches" in implementation monetary law. In the condition of technological revolutions, environmental crises, and pandemics shocks, EU monetary legislation requires some modification of the central bank mandate and monetary-fiscal coordination mechanism. In light of these challenges, we welcome all theoretical and empirical papers that cut dealing with (but are not limited to):

- Challenges of European monetary and economic integration;
- A new model of economic governance in a time of crisis;
- Implementation of Banking and Fiscal Union concept in EMU;

With the support of the
Erasmus+ Programme
of the European Union

- Monetary conduct and human rights protection;
- Green central banking;
- New competencies of (European) central banks;
- Monetary sovereignty and sovereign debt crises;
- Digital currency;
- Changes in central bank management and legislation;
- Monetary disputes and the role of courts;
- Fiscal rules and monetary-fiscal policy mix;
- Challenges of monetary and fiscal Integration of South East European Countries and Western Balkans.

Having in mind your scientific opus, we are pleased to invite you to take part in this Conference as a presenter. The participants are kindly requested to submit their draft papers (in English max 4000 words) no later than 30th April 2023 (following instructions from attachments) to the email: markod1985@prafak.ni.ac.rs or moneta@ni.ac.rs. The participants' papers will be published in a thematic Collection of Conference Papers. We hope that you will be able to accept the invitation and personally contribute to the Conference activities.

Respectfully yours,

Jean Monnet Module for European Monetary Law Organizing Committee

With the support of the
Erasmus+ Programme
of the European Union

